Close of day

The College of Occupational Therapists and Skills for Care invite you to attend our reablement conference to explore the contribution good reablement can make to those providing and receiving care and support.

This conference will provide an opportunity to hear the latest research related to reablement and find out how to measure the success of reablement. It will also look at examples of how employers are using reablement services for successful outcomes.

The event will be useful for social care employers, owners, people involved in learning and development and commissioners. Those attending will hear from key experts in the field of reablement and have an opportunity to explore with colleagues how you might get the best out of a reablement services and the 'must have' ingredients for a successful reablement service.

Reablement services aim to help people accommodate their illness or condition by learning or relearning the skills necessary for daily living (Care Services Efficiency Delivery Programme, Homecare Reablement Workstream 2007).

Learning outcomes

By attending the event, delegates will:

- Gain a greater understanding of what makes for a successful reablement service for both the person receiving care and support and the organisation in terms of budget, sustainability and best practice
- Learn about different models of reablement practice
- Understand what metrics are useful in determining the success of reablement
- Hear from successful providers of reablement and share best practices
